

ABSTRACT

An antenna assembly has a lower break assembly and an upper break assembly. Both have a center fed transmission line within a conductive tube, and both are mutually connectable for connecting the transmission lines to each other at a junction. When connected, the lower break assembly and upper break assembly form one pole of a center-fed dipole radiator without significant signal loss through the junction.